These Hair Removal Devices Make a Good Case for Shaving Your Face

If you can't stand getting your upper lip and cheeks threaded or waxed, listen up. Shaving your face is an easy, pain-free alternative to other hair removal treatments, and the latest products make it easy to do from the comfort of your home. Not only do these handy gadgets work to gently de-fuzz your face, but they also make for a more seamless makeup application and glowier, smoother complexion.

And contrary to what you might think, shaving your face won't cause the hair there to return with a vengeance. "It's a common misconception that cutting or shaving hair makes it grow back thicker or darker," says Dendy Engelman, MD, a dermatologist in New York City. "The diameter and color are not affected by shaving the hair shaft."
