Kehinde Wiley (American, b.1977) is an influential painter who riffs the legacy of portraiture by featuring Black subjects (most notably President Barack Obama) using the conventions of traditional European portraiture. His subjects are painted naturalistically against intricate bright floral backgrounds and are often portrayed in their street clothes for a striking contrast. His work calls attention to the absence of these subjects from art history and celebrates their beauty and power.

Roy McMakin

Roy McMakin's (American, b.1956) art practice explores how functionality influences meaning within the media of sculpture, photography, design, and architecture. He often re-imagines and re-situates the context of the art object to alter its meaning and poke fun at its use. His clever use of sight-lines in his larger sculptures further pushes viewers to find new ways to experience art and question their physical interaction with the work.

The Broken Juice Glass

Set of 4 6 oz. glasses. Boxed.

Enjoy wine or juice with this interactive set of juice glasses that feature the aphorisms "THINGS CHANGE" and "CHANGE THINGS" in a conceptual progression. The text becomes more fragmented with each glass and the user must carefully align the text to read the phrases. Hand-signed card included; limited edition of 300; dishwasher safe.

Retail: $200 | Wholesale $100 | Min. 1

Mickalene Thomas

Mickalene Thomas (American, b.1971) is an influential contemporary artist most known for her complex collage paintings and striking photographs that celebrate female beauty, power and sexuality. She often portrays Black women as subjects and explores their relationship to art history and contemporary culture at-large.

Lena Blanket

80 x 64". Boxed.

This beautifully crafted, limited edition wool blanket by Pendleton Mills features a reversible design and fits a full or queen bed. Better yet, skip the bed and hang it on the wall like a tapestry. Dry clean only; edition of 125; hand-signed suede label.

Retail: $1,200 | Wholesale $600 | Min. 1

LigoranoReese

LigoranoReese is the collaborative name of Nora Ligorano (American, b. 1956) and Marshall Reese (American, b.1955) whose multi-disciplinary practice focuses on the present and uses technologies of our time to question how social and political systems relate, build, interact, or harm society. Included in their practice is the use of limited edition multiples to both give access of these ideas to a broader audience and to situate them in a domestic context.
