REGION

The South Australian wine region encompasses a range of soil types, altitudes and weather conditions allowing an assortment of grape varieties to be planted. These vines produce wines with classic varietal character and simpler, fruit-driven flavour profiles. Climatic variation adds complexity to the finished wine.

VINTAGE

Higher than average rainfall in spring led to a delay in vine flowering and ultimately a later than usual start to vintage. Expected disease issues due to the high rainfall failed to materialise as the summer months were warm and dry. February saw intermittent rain and heat slow ripening and delay harvest for some varieties even further. Fruit quality was not impacted with many varieties showing especially good wine outcomes.
