Honey-Can-Do Acquires Joyce Chen® and Origins® from Columbian Home Products

Berkeley, IL – January 27, 2020 – Leading housewares provider Honey-Can-Do International (www.honeycando.com) announced today that it has acquired all assets related to the Joyce Chen®, Origins® and Keilen units from Columbian Home Products. These leading brands of woks, stir fry pans and food preparation items are complementary to Honey-Can-Do’s kitchen products, including those under the Kitchen Supply Company, Zevro, Old Stone Oven and Honey-Can-Do brands.

“The Joyce Chen, Keilen and Origins brands have been considered leaders in the Asian, Italian and Mexican food preparation category for decades,” said Steve Greenspon, CEO of Honey-Can-Do, said. “The entire Honey-Can-Do team is excited to welcome these brands to the Honey-Can-Do family and introduce innovative new products within these categories.”

Joyce Chen became a national icon when what is now Public Broadcasting System (PBS) launched the show Joyce Chen Cooks where Chen introduced America to elevated Asian cuisine. She became a household name and patented the design for the flat bottom wok, otherwise known as the stir-fry pan.

Honey-Can-Do will continue to offer the Joyce Chen® assortment of high-quality Asian cookware that includes everything from woks and stir-fry pans to cooking tools essential for making Asian cuisine. The highly-regarded Origins® collection will consist of cookware and cooking accessories specific to Asian, Italian and Mexican cuisine.

The new lines will be on display at Honey-Can-Do’s North Hall booth (#7336) at The Inspired Home International Housewares Show in Chicago in March.

This marks the fourth acquisition for Honey-Can-Do. The company previously acquired acclaimed kitchen accessories brand Kitchen Supply Company, Urbio, Inc., known for their award-winning vertical storage system, and the Zevro brand of cereal/dry food dispensers and barware.
