

Missing the Most Important Point

It's been a minute since a "W" was written next to my name.

Last week, I was fortunate enough to join some work friends in TX. There we laughed for hours, got some work done, and had an amazing Cowgirl Church. Vollie Heitkamp shared the most amazing messages with us which opened my eyes to what I have been doing wrong this entire summer.

I'd been doing all the things to become "successful"...practicing every day, watching endless hours of breakaway videos, staying positive in tough times, and most importantly speaking to God about my goals and truly thanking Him for all I've been blessed with.

But it wasn't until this past week that I realized I was missing the most important point. I had only been doing it for one person, me. After realizing this, Vollie also explained that sometimes you just need to REST... rely entirely on the Savior's timing.

So I did just that, when I returned home the morning of the TBRA Finals, I decided it was ok that I didn't go straight to the barn to rope the dummy. To instead, rest. I decided I was going to give it all to Him. I decided from this point on I was going to try really hard to be the person he created me to be, for HIM. And I believe because of that, He opened the door for me to be at this finals that I did not qualify for. Then added a cherry on top...wrote a "W" next to my name.

Thank you, Triple B Rodeo for the awesome finals. You all worked so hard to have a dry and safe performance, and it was that and more. God sure painted a beautiful sky for us!

Give God All the Glory.
