DON'T MISS

Dynamic duo

Performance-art duo The Huxleys are making their way to WA for Wrap Your Troubles In Dreams, a massive retrospective exhibition at the Fremantle Arts Centre showcasing 10 years of collaborative projects between the pair. Known for their extravagant, androgynous and unapologetically queer aesthetic to champion the queer agenda, The Huxleys are also the headline act at The Art Gallery of WA's Met Gala-style Art Ball on November 9 for PrideFEST 2024. The free exhibition is at Fremantle Arts Centre, November 9 to January 27.

Starlit opera

WA Opera is headed to Quarry Amphitheatre with Songs in the Quarry on November 13 and Opera in the Quarry, November 14 to 16. Songs in the Quarry is a celebration of singing featuring WA Opera's Wesfarmers Arts Singing Class and WA Young Voices in a one night only performance of opera and musical theatre favourites. Tickets at waopera.asn.au.

Midnight Martini Lounge at Rechabite

Jazz lovers cosied on green velvet lounges sipping martinis and embraced the alluring atmosphere inside Perth's limited Midnight Martini Lounge.

The free event at The Rechabite is on until Saturday and sees vinyl jazz DJs, songstress Jessie Gordon and roving showgirl Lucy Lovegun offer evenings full of vintage glamour.

Guests can descend to the centennial basement, savour martinis and more from an exclusive and meticulously crafted cocktail menu, and indulge in bar snacks whilst enjoying the pop-up musical experience.

Former Married At First Sight star Lauren Dunn was spotted with her public relations friend Taylor James, with both ladies looking stunning in all-black outfits.

Linneys' bold reveal

The latest sparkling collection from Linneys was on show at an exclusive invitation VIP event, with pieces inspired by the State's Kimberley region.

Guests discovered the vibrant and untamed spirit of the Kimberley's landscape, brought to life in Linney's latest fine jewellery collection, Bold by Nature, launched inside Wildflower at Como the Treasury.

The model for the new collection is hometown star Sarsha Chisholm. The daughter of former Dockers player Scott Chisholm headlined Myer's Spring/Summer campaign in 2020. Subsequent collaborations with brands such as Kmart, Bondi Sands and Rove further spotlighted her as a rising star.

In an interview with PerthNow, she voiced her pride in magnifying her deep-rooted heritage through her profession and wanted to pave the way for future First Nations models. Pictures: Alan Chau

WHISPERS

Halloween spirit on show

In true Perth fashion, Friday's Halloween brought plenty of eye-catching costumes and humorous props spread throughout each corner of the city.

The predictable Raygun costumes were topped by giant dinosaurs and gorillas roaming the streets and public transport.

This dinosaur was seen roaming Clarkson station in Perth's north before hopping on a prehistoric ride down the Butler line.

It was perhaps en route to see the giant life-like gorilla that was also snapped walking the streets of the northern suburbs.

In the southern end of town, one home took their Halloween display to new heights, launching a giant cherry picker in the air to show off one skeleton and another person in a frightening skeleton outfit putting on an unforgettable performance for a busy Palmyra street.

The Leeuwin Ocean Adventure Foundation also got in the fun, urging visitors to "watch out for evil container ships" two months after the historic sail boat was struck and damaged.

Market pull

An interesting sign in Dianella was posted to Perth's Reddit page last week, with one home snapped with a sign advertising its 'un-vaxed' sperm for sale. We're not sure how successful this marketing plan was, with the original poster of the image seeing the funny side and labelling it as "cooker" sperm for sale.
