TYLER ELLIS

Frequenting classic Beverly Hills hot spots was a major part of Tyler Ellis' Los Angeles upbringing, so it's no wonder the handbag designer—and daughter of the late fashion icon Perry Ellis—recently moved the headquarters of her eponymous label from NYC to L.A. "This city is such a special place to me," says Ellis, whose luxe, contemporary bags have lured such A-list fans as Reese Witherspoon and Gigi Hadid. Here, she shares her favorite 90210 stomping grounds. • The Polo Lounge at The Beverly Hills Hotel. Even after all these years, I still can spend hours sipping rosé and people-watching in the garden. dorchestercollection.com. • Umberto for a quick blow-dry and mani-pedi. Ask for Vo for nails and get one of his incredible leg or back massages. umbertobh.com. • Christie's Los Angeles has been a source of inspiration for decorating my new home in Brentwood. The Kulapat Yantrasast-designed building alone is a reason to go. christies.com. • Yazawa for authentic Japanese barbeque. The A5 Wagyu beef literally melts in your mouth. yazawameat.us. • The Biologique Recherche facial at The Peninsula Spa is my saving grace. Don't forget to try the heavenly ginger tea. peninsula.com.
