

(JW) 'My contact with Zadore is to disseminate the Transmissions through whatever medium that relates to the state of consciousness of the world at the present moment. We are working with people who have moved out of the superstitions of the religious attitudes over the past centuries that held the life and mind of humanity in ignorance and conditioned by the philosophies of ancient Greece and Egypt.

'Zadore's transmissions provide the student with the understanding of how the Illusion of separation and the fragmentation of thought, as well as our attachment to the acquisition of material possessions, drives us further from being our original natural Self and creates a mechanical way of living that leads to insecurity, pain and suffering. The greater our attachment to material possessions and our body the more we increase our separation and loneliness.

'I always heeded Zadore's wish that there should never be an Organization built around the teachings and transmissions because, as always with organizations, groups are formed that breed the negative desires for personal vanity, control and the desire for material wealth and power.

'Wherever people gather to follow a system of study of the inner teachings that lead to personal enlightenment it is always the leaders who claim that one can reach that state through Their Organization. This we have seen with the teaching of Jesus, who taught the way to the Kingdom Within by work, effort and following what he taught; however, a religion was later created that proclaimed It was the body of Jesus and that one can only reach the Kingdom of Heaven through Its Church. This effectively destroyed the way that Jesus taught, which is personal union with one's inner Self.

'Everything that Zadore has given humanity relates to individual effort and not to involvement with fellowships of organizations. In other words we must seek and follow the Light within and not the Light of others.

'I know that, in due course, I too will leave this body, but I also know that the Transmissions are not mine and I have no attachment with them. The Truth is never lost for humanity, and remains deep within the consciousness of those enlightened, because what is attained, lived and understood, lives on in consciousness for all eternity.

'When you remember that you are I Am that "I", then you no longer experience separation with one another even though you function in the world in separate bodies.'

§ 1

We have to consider how humanity has failed in finding the way where an individual can understand and become free of the Illusional World that they have created in their consciousness. Everyone is unaware that they live in an Illusional world, believing that what they see and understand through their bodily senses is their reality, little knowing that this Illusional world separates them from reaching an inner state of freedom, which will reveal their true state of being.

Before we can understand the reality of this inner state, we must begin to realize that our intellect, emotional and physical attachments with our body represent our level of being, and at this Illusional state of being – the sensual level of being – we cannot know anything that exists beyond this outer worldly knowledge.

People will argue that they have studied the lives of the saints and other holy people who have transcended the material world and experienced periods of illumination, enlightenment and oneness, with Jesus or the Buddha, depending on one's belief system, and that this proves it is possible to have spiritual knowledge beyond the general worldly experiences.

These states of inner understanding are nothing more than projections of imagination and emotional states that are the result of individual conditioning, based on teachings and doctrines of the different religions that have no substance or truth.

When we become capable of perceiving that everything in our world is based on our belief in the power that different authorities possess, authorities such as different faiths, gurus, governments, and 'isms' like nationalism and so on, and that all of these create borders that separate human beings, leading to suspicion, conflict, violence and wars, we will understand that we are conditioned in our behavior and are not free to think for ourselves.

By accepting this conditioning, it is impossible to find the freedom to be what we truly are – a human being – not an automaton of the State.

For many thousands of years humanity has accepted such conditioning as essential to protect the way of life to which they have subjected themselves, and this has led to the acceptance of using violence and war to maintain their Illusional freedom.

Regardless of such conditioning, many people attempt to transcend their lower nature through what is provided in the illusion by the various religions and sects, which are accepted as being the vehicle of truth.

Anything else, such as personal responsibility and involvement in one's life, appears too difficult, so it is better to work through an established system.

Everyone has their excuses for taking the easy way, such as:

... It is too difficult; takes up too much of my personal time; I have family commitments; I need to get ahead in my profession...

Or ... It is easier to follow a recognized path, one that leads to bliss and enlightenment, without having to diminish my pleasures in the world. I can join a religion of my choice, and by following their doctrines I will reach the ultimate goal when I die...

Or ... For my next vacation I will travel overseas and join an ashram and find a guru of my choice who will map out my way to enlightenment and all I have to do is meditate and think I am one with my guru who will inwardly direct me to enlightenment... and so on...-

Or ...There are many sects who claim to have preserved all the secret higher knowledge from antiquity, and through secret initiations I will attain power and mastership that will shield me from all this outer pain and suffering of the world...

All these different methods result in us only becoming conditioned by another Authority, and we remain locked in illusion, never knowing the freedom of being where there is no pain, suffering, insecurity and loneliness.

Often this blind attraction to a leader, organization or guru, fails to give us the security we seek and we constantly move from one thing to another and never become free to think and act from our own inner strength.

Everyone in the world is conditioned from birth by outside authorities, first by our parents, who unknowingly create the conditions where we face a life of acceptance of Authority. This begins for us at pre and primary school, extending to religion, further education, and a belief in science and governmental control, all of which create separation and fragmented living, and results in insecurity, suffering, pain and violence.

The only way to end all this separation, insecurity and violence is through self-awareness, by being conscious of our inner nature, our behavior, our vanity, lies, and aggression. When we become aware of what constitutes our inner nature, we will find the way to burn up and trash all those Illusions that separate us from our true state of being.

First we should understand that there are three methods that people traditionally follow when attempting to break free from this illusion, methods which they hope will lead to experiencing a higher state of being.

These three methods involve the utilization and purification of either the Intellect, the Emotions or the Physical Centers.

At this point we will learn what Zadore has taught about these Centers.
