With the new season edit, we tried to question the notion of seasonality in our current world of fashion apparel and retail environment. Are season specific collections relevant in a time where the nefarious effects of climate change can be felt everywhere?

What we wear today and we already own in our wardrobe is one's personal selection of "stuff", comfort wear more appropriately, that sees us through the transition from hot to cold. And as designers, while we seek inspiration in the colors of autumn leaves, we also need to keep our wearer in mind.

Plush outerwear and luxe dresses, herald a return of some of our inhouse favourites in a classic palette of ivory, grey and navy; these are year round colors. The collection is heavy on details- silk trims on cotton, stripes mixed with solids and subtle florals. We are staying in our androgynous zone but adding elements that are alluring
