Globally Harmonized System as per 29 CFR 1910.1200 (HCS 2012)
Online Course Outline

Overview:
In 1983, OSHA issued the first Hazard Communication Standard (29 CFR 1910.1200) requiring that employers train and continuously provide information on the chemical hazards in the workplace. OSHA updated this standard in 1994. In March 2012, OSHA reissued the HazCom Standard (29 CFR 1910.1200) to meet the Globally Harmonized System (GHS) of Classification and Labeling of Chemicals. This new HazCom Standard, known by OSHA as HCS 2012, is a complete realignment of the rules regarding the employer’s, manufacturers, and distributor’s roles in communicating hazards to workers. One of the mandates from OSHA is the training requirement that all employees have the updated training by December 1, 2013.

Who should take this course?
Managers, Supervisors, and Employees.
