

VOGUE

17 Vogue Editors on Their Best Quarantine Beauty Discovery

Tammy Fender Plant Milk

“My skin has been an absolute mess in lockdown—breakouts, dry patches, and eczema are issues that seem to be plaguing me all at once, especially as the weather has gotten frigid. A colleague introduced me to Tammy Fender’s Plant Milk just when I was beginning to lose hope. It’s seriously the most soothing balm I’ve ever tried. Where other creams have left my skin feeling dry or irritated, this lotion leaves me with a dewy sheen. It seems to lock in the moisture in a way that I don’t even have to layer up with an oil anymore. Plus it’s light enough that I don’t have to worry about pimples. Don’t ask me to name all the special natural ingredients; all I know is that it’s considered ‘holistic’ skin care and it actually works.” —Chioma Nnadi, Vogue.com editor