A MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

The long-awaited 2025 Tour to Australia by the British & Irish Lions is looming as the most attended in our game's history and, as in 2013, will be an occasion not to be missed. One of the most iconic sporting teams in the world, the Lions are drawn from the best players in England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland and tour Australia just once every 12 years.

Never playing at home, the Lions travel to Australia, New Zealand and South Africa on a rotational basis every four years and take with them a passionate supporter base numbering in tens of thousands. The tradition of the Lions, combined with the infrequency of their tours, drives the magnitude and uniqueness that surrounds this iconic team. A Lions Tour is an occasion that every sports fan should experience.

In 2025, the Lions will play nine matches in Australia, including three Tests against our own Wallabies. They will play the five Australian Super Rugby teams – the Force, Reds, Waratahs, Brumbies, and Rebels – and a Combined team from Australia and New Zealand.

It will be a massive occasion and, apart from the Rugby World Cup, there is no more significant event in international Rugby. A Test cap against the Lions is an even more elusive honour for a Wallabies player to attain. The Rugby World Cup comes around every four years. Legends of Australian Rugby like Tim Horan and Phil Kearns had the opportunity to play in three of them and be part of two successful campaigns. They also played in numerous Bledisloe Cup series triumphs over the All Blacks. Yet these two Wallabies greats, with so many accolades and achievements punctuating their extended careers as international Rugby stars, never had the opportunity to play a Test against the British & Irish Lions.

The last three British & Irish Lions Tours of Australia are still remembered for some of the most defining moments in Australian Rugby history. All three-Test series went down to the wire, with the Lions winning 2-1 in 1989, the Wallabies taking the honours 2-1 in 2001 and the Lions getting revenge 2-1 in 2013. Expect nothing less from the 2025 Tour.

2013 will live on in our memories for the incredible support of the Lions fans. The Lions brought with them their now famous Sea of Red. It was a supporter base of the like we have never seen in this country. They were extremely vocal – singing and chanting throughout the Tests – and their passion was infectious.

As we have already seen, the demand for tickets is enormous. This Tour has been 12 Years in the making. I urge you to be there, witness history being made, and collect what will be lifetime memories of the 2025 Lions Series.
