

Pillow Talk - February Flow

People seem to either love or loathe this month--very few of us find ourselves on neutral ground regarding Valentine's Day. But what we often fail to realize is that as there are many different types of love (eight, according to the ancient Greeks), so are there more reasons to celebrate such a day! The rest of the month is kind of a wash anyway, as winter feels like it's still hanging on in most parts of the country, and not in the fun way. So, why not use the excuse to show a little love?

Whether it's for parents, children, coworkers, spouses, friends, your dog, or yourself, giving a little extra love in whatever form you choose is really never going to hurt. Maybe you need some "me time" cozied up with your Uniik Pillows while binge-watching your favorite show. Or maybe it just means you'll be picking up a coffee for someone, calling up an old friend, or getting dinner started before your spouse gets home. But why stop there?

Don't limit yourself to the commercialism of it all; don't feel like you have to stick to specific traditions or even to just one day. Why not start a healthy habit of expressing your love regularly, on non-holidays? Believe it or not, doing so will have as much impact on you as it will the loved one you bless. The world needs a lot more love these days, but it's got to start somewhere. Best part is, it's contagious!

Much love to all of you, our faithful followers. Happy Valentine's Day!

Uniik-ly yours,

The Gals
