LEUVEN UNIVERSITY PRESS

Books in Open Access

Why publish books in Open Access?

Open Access stands for:

- Disseminating research more effectively
- Increasing public access
- Boosting impact
- Digital preservation
- High-quality control

Open Access (OA) embodies the ideal of scholarly communications: scholarly, peer-reviewed knowledge that is accessible worldwide. It offers advantages for authors, researchers, and libraries. For authors it extends the reach of their work and increases citation rates as well as the societal impact of their publications. Researchers benefit from worldwide access and retrievability. Libraries can provide wider access to scholarly information.

Why publish with Leuven University Press?

True to its commitment to disseminate scholarly knowledge and to support academic research, Leuven University Press has the expertise and resources to publish books in full Open Access.

1. Guaranteed Peer-Reviewed Content (GPRC label): Peer review is standard procedure. All new proposals and manuscripts are presented to an independent editorial board and to two specialist readers for expert advice.
2. Worldwide access via JSTOR, Project Muse, OAPEN: In this way Leuven University Press offers a sustainable publication model that guarantees global impact, dissemination and digital preservation.
3. Also available in paper edition: Besides the free online publication readers can also buy a paper edition.
4. International marketing and promotion: Leuven University Press commits itself to reaching a global audience of readers.

How to publish in OA with Leuven University Press?

Leuven University Press offers two different roads to Open Access.

The green road to Open Access, or so-called 'self-archiving', is the most accessible way to an OA publication. Authors of contributions, chapters, or articles are allowed to archive the pdf file of their contribution in the layout of the publication on their personal website immediately upon publication.

In the golden road scenario the entire book appears in full Open Access from the first day of publication. In this model financial means are needed to fund the production of the free ebook. The book processing charges (BPC) are calculated for each project individually and can be financed by all kinds of grants or institutional funding. Whereas the BPC covers the production costs of the freely downloadable online publication, Leuven University Press additionally provides a print edition for sale.
