

Book of Ink Circles Feb. 24, 2009

This segment concludes our journey in creating this illuminated piece. If you are just stumbling across this chart now, this is just one portion of a larger mystery. You need the symbol key and the placement frame to make the entire project.

Book of Ink Circles Feb. 24, 2009

Thank You for stitching along with us. I hope you have enjoyed the mystery, the camaraderie, and perhaps even learned a thing or two from one another as you undertook the project.

This chart was provided to you without charge or obligation. If you have enjoyed it, I ask you to pay the kindness forward. Please commit three (or more) random acts of kindness to help keep the karmic balance of the universe to the good :-).

The magnitude and creativity of these acts is up to you. Something as simple as putting a few cans of soup into the food bank collection box or taking that unwanted thread and fabric to a local senior center could make someone's day quite a bit brighter.

Now, on with the final piece...

This is just a portion of the mystery. You need the symbol key and the placement frame to use this graph as part of that project.

You can, however, use this pattern stand-alone as a square by making the fourth corner match the other three.

You can also rotate this "fishtail" piece to use in any of the four corners of the design. It is recommended to be used in the upper-left corner or the bottom-right corner.

This is just a portion of the mystery. You need the mystery, the symbol key and the placement frame to use this graph as part of that project.

You can, however, use this pattern stand-alone as a square for an ornament or biscornu.

You can also use this piece in any of the four same-sized squares on the right or left edges in the design. Technically it fits in the four down the central vertical axis, too, but we're saving those for other things.
