The Clouds Ye So Much Dread
(Hannah K. Grieser)
$24.99 Paperback

Hard Times and the Kindness of God

A beautiful blend of memoir, theology, meditation, and storytelling. Each of these chapters describes the stories through which Hannah has come to see that hard or uncertain circumstances, rather than being cause for doubt and dread, can instead become the unasked-for means that our loving Father uses to turn us toward Him and to show us His faithfulness. The reflections in this powerful book will challenge readers to revisit their own hard times and see how God can take the storms that we most fear and turn them into downpours of blessings.

A message from the Manager

Hi there! From everyone here at Reformers, welcome to 2018. We are excited by the great new books we have in this brochure. We are confident that you will be sure to find a book that will build you up in your most holy faith. Jude 20

2017 was a year full of changes and many Christians are wondering what the future may hold. So we sat down with Michael Kellahan from Freedom for Faith to get his perspective (p. 04) and we also put together some exciting new books as well as some wonderful older titles that will help you think through what it means to live in a secular society. We pray that these books will help you to “hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering.” Heb 10-23

Easter is also coming up on us which is a wonderful opportunity to set aside time to consider the great victory that Christ has won for His people on the cross. We trust that the new Lent devotional, ‘Glory of the Cross’ from our partners The Good Book Company will help many of you to purposefully consider Christ’s work on the cross (p. 08).

As always, if you are ever looking for a book and need a hand, send us an email or give us a call on 02 9564 3555. We love to help people find great Christian books to read. We would be glad to help you out.

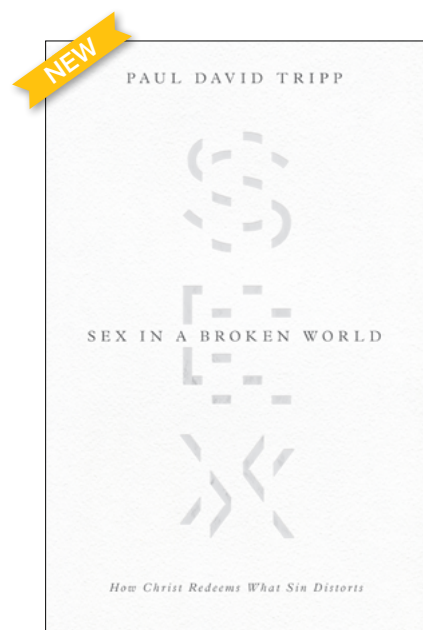

For His Glory,
Thomas Eglinton

Life in the Wild
Fighting For Faith in a Fallen World
(Dan DeWitt) $19.99 Paperback

We see Jesus, we believe in Jesus and we wait for Jesus, yet still we suffer. This book offers real and rugged answers in life’s dark places. Discover how to live with hope in a fallen world and be encouraged.

Walking through Genesis 3, Dan DeWitt shows us how we can look at this world realistically but without despairing, as we wait for God to keep his promise to bring us out of the wild and into his new creation. It’s the contrast between Eden, where everything reflects God’s perfection, and exile, where everything is spoiled by sin. The book helps us survive living in exile - Life in the Wild - until “the glorious day when God will welcome us home, out of the wild”.

This book holds dark and light in balance. It shows how we are living with the effects of the fall - but God’s promise, made in Eden, serves as a beacon of light to guide our steps in this fallen world.

Discover why our fallen world is how it is, and how to live with hope in God’s promises.

“This is a fresh and urgent field guide to life in the real world — the world of brokenness, tragedy and disappointment. Dan DeWitt gives us not only clarity and realism, but also wonderful hope as he consistently and carefully points us to Christ. It did me good to read it!”

Take Heart
Interview with Michael Kellahan
Executive Director of Freedom for Faith

Given the legislation that has gone through recently and the impact that has for us as Christians, what do you think the challenges are going to be for Christians in the coming months and years?

We certainly took a position which said that changes to the marriage act were going to bring consequences just as they have throughout the rest of the western world. I think we will start to see those play out. But we also want to put religious freedom on a broader base than that.

This is not just about a florist and a baker and whatever happens to be going on in the US Supreme Court at the moment. It’s actually a real issue for Australian’s about whether there is going to be a place for faith in the public square; whether the public square becomes naturally god-less and religion becomes a private thing. And that can find lots and lots of different forms, not just marriage.

As a general Christian living life in work and school, what sort of things should we be doing in light of this legislation?

It is very helpful to have a historical and global perspective on some of this; to globally be aware that persecution is taking place on a genocidal scale with people being targeted because of their belief and only because of their belief. And to be able to say historically that that is something we have certainly seen as well. To therefore appreciate that the freedoms we have enjoyed in the West are ones that we shouldn’t take for granted.

With that context, what will that mean? That means that we will be prayerful for our brothers and sister who face persecution. We will be realistic about what it is that faces us here. But I think it also means that we will be prayerful and engaged and speaking about these kinds of issues. Not just to protect our own rights and see that we have a privileged spot but really in order to love our neighbour. In order to see a flourishing of the community that is good for gospel proclamation.

What brings you encouragement as a Christian in times like this?

Well, the grave is still empty. So, the resurrection of Christ.

Psalm 2, which shows that God laughs at the nations as they rally against His Christ, against his anointed one. So again, that biblical perspective that says God is sovereign, God is good. The kingdom of God is not at stake here. And so, we can trust in God’s power and goodness. I wouldn’t be doing any of the things I am doing if I didn’t have that conviction already.

Are there any books in particular that stand out as really impacting your life?

Look, it’s a bit like asking for favourite children. I’m not sure!

One of the things I’m discovering is that some of the really old books actually have a lot of wisdom in this space, as you think about public theology.

It shouldn’t really come as a surprise but I think it did to realise that all the reformers struggled with this in different ways. Whether it’s Martin Luther with the German princes and the peasant’s revolution. Whether it’s Calvin and trying to think about how Geneva should run and how to deal with the persecution in France and what that meant as he wrote to the French king.

Again and again it feels like great public theology has been done at times when there has been conflict and pressure and tension and change and, potentially, the end of empire, those kinds of things taking place.

I think we are still waiting for that book for Australia; I’m not sure who would write it. But it would be good to be praying for people to be grappling afresh with the same gospel at a time when the West is really struggling with its self-identity and its sense of what it’s there for and what its connection is with a Christian Heritage.

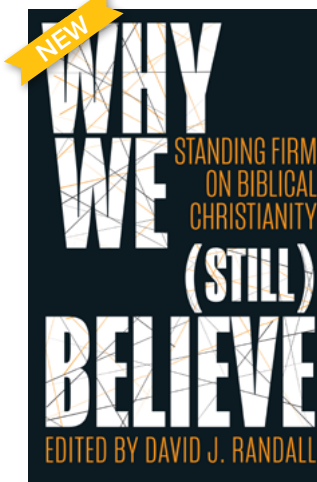

Great public theology has been done at times when there has been conflict and pressure and tension and change and, potentially, the end of empire.

Theistic Evolution

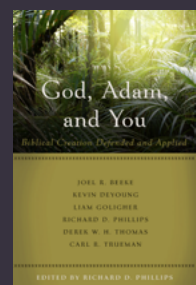

(J. P. Moreland, Stephen C. Meyer, Christopher Shan, Ann K. Gauger & Wayne Grudem, editors)

$69.99 Hardcover

The debate about biological origins continues to be hotly contested within the Christian church. Prominent organizations such as Biologos and Faraday Institute insist that Christians must yield to an unassailable scientific consensus in favour of contemporary evolutionary theory and modify traditional biblical ideas about the creation of life accordingly. They argue that God used—albeit in an undetectable way—evolutionary mechanisms to produce all forms of life. This book contests this proposal. Featuring two dozen highly credentialed scientists, philosophers, and theologians from Europe and North America, this volume provides the most comprehensive critique of theistic evolution yet produced.

"... I was excited to hear about this ambitious project, but the final book has exceeded my expectations. The editors have assembled an impressive cast of experts and the content is top-notch. Theistic evolutionists, and those swayed by their arguments, owe it to themselves to read and digest this compendium of essays. This book is timely and necessary—quite literally a godsend."

"Like Philip in the chariot of the Ethiopian court official, MacArthur takes up his pen and, beginning from Isaiah, preaches Jesus to us! The work is scholarly yet devotional—a resource for teaching the gospel to the church and a tool for the evangelisation of both Jew and Gentile." — Paul David Washer

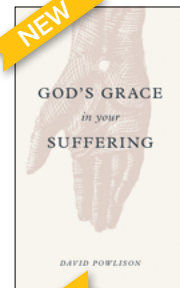

The Gospel-Shaped Life

(Ian Hamilton)
$14.99 Paperback

The gospel does so much more than rescue us from hell and save us for heaven. It also takes possession of our lives and remakes them into the image and likeness of Jesus Christ (Rom. 8:29). This is God's ultimate purpose for every one of his blood-bought and dearly loved children.

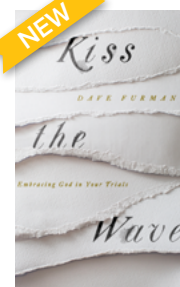

How does the gospel do this? And what does a gospel-shaped life look like? And what impact will such a life have on others? These are some of the questions raised and answered by Ian Hamilton in this book.
