The Fear of God

A message from the Manager

Greetings from all the staff here at Reformers Bookshop. We regularly pray for the Lord to work through the books that we send out across Australia and New Zealand. We also pray that the resources you find in this brochure are helpful to you and build you up.

One of the highlights of the first few months of the year was serving at the Banner of Truth conference in March. It is wonderful to see Banner of Truth continue in their labours with some great new titles released recently. I've picked one Banner highlight below. You will find other titles throughout this brochure.

We also had the privilege of hosting Tim Challies at our bookshop. You can find an excerpt of an interview we had with Tim on page 4. We trust it will encourage you in your reading.

Be sure to have a look at our new website which we launched earlier this year (reformers.com.au). You will find a growing resource base of book reviews, interviews and articles. We trust that the improved search function will also be of great use as it enables you to rapidly find trustworthy books on any topic.

As always, if you would like a hand finding a great Christian book please feel free to get in touch by phone, email or online. We love to help people find great Christian books.

For His Glory,
Thomas Eglinton

NEW
Spurgeon on the Christian Life
Alive in Christ
(Michael Reeves) $22.99 Paperback

Charles Spurgeon, widely hailed as the "Prince of Preachers," is well known for his powerful preaching, gifted mind, and compelling personality. Over the course of nearly four decades at London's famous New Park Street Chapel and Metropolitan Tabernacle, Spurgeon preached and penned words that continue to resonate with God's people today.

Organized around the main beliefs that undergirded his ministry—the centrality of Christ, the importance of the new birth, the indwelling of the Spirit, and the necessity of the Bible—this introduction to Spurgeon's life and thought will challenge readers to live their lives for the glory of God.

Responsible for a veritable torrent of words, most of which remain in print a dozen decades after his death, he is one of the great Christian authors of the nineteenth century. And it is only right, therefore, that he be known and read by that wide audience of evangelicals who love his Savior. This book is a tremendous place to start: a draft of refreshment from deep Spurgeonian wells—just what is needed in our day.

How am I to Read a Book?

Interview with Tim Challies

We were talking just before the interview about how you were reviewing about a book a week and reading even more than that. Most of us struggle to even read a few books a year, how do you get time to do that and how do you approach reading a book?

go find another book and read that. So, there’s no necessary value in finishing a book. John Piper said, “Books don’t change people, sentences do.” So, if you’re reading a book and you get one solid idea out of that book it is well worth whatever you spent on it and whatever time you gave it. As I look back on my life and the things I say, or things I believe in I can often trace it just a sentence or two to a book. There are very few books where the entire book has shaped me. Often it’s just a line here or a line there which goes down deep and somehow changes your life.

You yourself are a blogger. And it seems that today we live in an age of blogs and video content. There’s unending resources out there in this digital world. With all that available to us why should we even bother going to a book when it’s much easier to go to a blog or watch a video?

I think the main benefit of books is that there’s a whole development process that goes into making a book. So, when people say, “Blogs are eventually going to replace books” they don’t know what they’re talking about, because those are different media. Blogs are quick and urgent and largely unedited. Books go through this long laborious process of research and writing and editorial. Most people don’t know this but when you submit a book to a publisher it’s usually six to twelve months before that book is actually released, and in that time, it is going through this very thorough process. So, I think books offer a much deeper, more editorialised view of a subject. Whereas blogs are very urgent. So, somebody passes away today, we can write a blog about their life tomorrow. But the more in-depth and thoughtful approach will be a year later when we’ve actually written a book about that.

If you’re not reading and you want to read more then you have to scale back on Netflix, or gaming or some other hobby and commit it to reading.

Reading is a habit that you have to form in all of life. People who say they don’t read, or that they don’t have time to read, need to realise that you have to take the time from something else. So, if you’re not reading and you want to read more then you have to scale back on Netflix, or gaming or some other hobby and commit it to reading. I think once you get into the reading habit you start to build the discipline and it gets easier. It’s like most things...people don’t read very much so they’re not very good at reading which sounds odd but it is a skill that you develop. They quit too early instead of really learning to develop the habit and start to do it as a lifestyle of being a reader.

Are there any tips you’d give about reading a book and how to start?

I think there is a lot of value in the old method of skimming over it and then going back and “deep” reading. I think a lot of people get hung up on, “I have to read the entire book.” I think there is nothing wrong with abandoning a book half way through if you’re not enjoying it, or it’s not good. Just cut your losses and

Dr. Guy Prentiss Waters leads us on a doctrinally enriching and spiritually edifying journey from Paul's life, conversion, and call to key themes in his theology.

Down, Not Out

Down, Not Out
Interview with Chris Cipollone

Chris, what prompted you to write this book?

Personal experience is the short answer. Depression and anxiety is a topic close to my heart. Particularly depression is something that I have lived with for almost 10 years now, I would say. Long story short, I ended up in a psychiatric clinic towards the end of my theological studies and I began preaching what I had learnt to myself. What would I say to somebody in my situation was the question I began to ask. I had read things on the topic in the Christian space before. Great resources, many that I would highly recommend. But I think what is distinctive about this book is I have shown a lot of myself. So it's not just pure theology. It's personal experience and how theology interplays with that. So, my hope is that it will be something that is relatable to people and to be honest I wouldn't have written it if I thought I didn't need to. It was a gap that I saw and in Christ I feel secure to share that vulnerability. So if that's a blessing to other people that will be great.

"Down, Not Out" is not just pure theology. It's personal experience and how theology interplays with that.

You definitely achieved that end. As I read it, it's very pastoral. It's not textbook on counselling or depression. I very much felt that you were speaking to me through it.

Should I only pick up this book if I am suffering depression – will it be helpful for me in that situation or are there other situations that it might be helpful for?

Good question. It's obviously come out of my own experience as someone who is suffering but my hope and prayer is that this is also a resource for pastors, for friends, for family members, churches who are trying to understand what it looks like to live with depression and anxiety. Every story is different and the brain is a complicated thing but my hope is that for somebody who is not living with it, in stepping into my shoes for a moment, they might be able to understand a little bit of what their loved ones are going through. So what I say at the start of the book is 'whether you are somebody who is living with depression and anxiety, somebody who wants to know how to care for someone who is or even if you are cynical about it and you think – is this really a thing - to each of those groups of people I say thank you for reading it.

Down, Not Out
(Chris Cipollone)
 $14.99, Paperback

Depression can lead to self-condemnation—and yet the gospel tells us there is no condemnation in Christ. Anxiety leads us to inner turmoil—but the gospel assures us of the love of God and the peace that comes with knowing him. Whether you have experienced mental illness yourself, or want to understand depression and anxiety to care for somebody you love, this book provides a personal and theologically-thoughtful reflection on the challenges facing Christians in this area.

"With compassion, clarity and humility, Chris walks the reader through a refreshing look at how God's grace in Christ is the most important antidote for anxiety and depression... [he] cautions us against simplistic quick-fixes. Rather, he offers a personal, gracious God who walks with us, encourages us, and provides hope and comfort along the path. Each carefully written chapter exudes comfort and hope. I can't think of anyone who doesn't need that!" - Dr. Timothy S. Lane

"Books for teenagers are not just found in the children's section. Expand their (your) reading by finding some easy-to-read "adult" books (general books!) and seek for teenagers to be built up in maturity in Christ – moving from milk to solid food."

Books for Teenagers
Review by Andrew Deligiorgakis

What I frequently hear from people is "there doesn't seem to be many good books for teenagers". At an age where teens are moving from childhood to adulthood, it's difficult to know what books would be beneficial. Here is my selection of books for teenagers.

One book that may have surprised you on my list is "Concise Theology" by J.I. Packer ($16.99 Paperback). This book is a staple for all bookshelves and should most certainly be read by teenagers. It is a systematic theology book that is in small portions of about 2 to 3 pages per topic. It's full of scripture, reason, explanation... and it's 'concise'!

For some church history I chose "Church History 101" (Ferguson, Beeke, Haykin, $9.99, Paperback). This book is small, is only 100 pages long and each of the 20 chapters briefly covers a century of history each. As an introduction, this is a great book to introduce young people to the church over the past 2000 years.

Calvin writes this in "A Little Book on the Christian Life" ($9.99, Paperback) regarding the short work this book is: "... even if a longer work on the subject of the Christian life were worthwhile, I would hesitate to attempt such now, because my purpose in this work is to present doctrine simply and concisely". This is a small book packed with truth and brimming with passion.

Something more modern, Jaquelle Crowe's book "This Changes Everything" ($19.99, Hardcover) is direct in its call for teenagers to own their faith and transform their identity to submit to God in all parts of their lives. She wrote it when she was eighteen, and it speaks loudly!

John Piper's "Don't Waste Your Life" ($16.99, Paperback) is one of those "new classic" books that needs to be read. As you read the book you can hear Piper's Minnesotan accent through each page as he gives emphasis of living for God's glory and not mediocre pursuits of comfort and fleeting passion.

For guys, "Disciplines of a Godly Young Man" by R. Kent Hughes and W. Carey Hughes ($19.99, Hardcover) is a call to be 'real' and own their Christian life in a godly manner. It's a call to maturity, and not the kind of immaturity we still see in tweens (those in their twenties that still have the maturity of a teenager).

"Face Time" by Kristen Hatton ($21.99, Paperback) is a book for girls to talk through identity, covering issues like body image, sex, materialism and more in an age of selfies and social media. With space for reflection and journaling it's a practical book that calls girls to be identified with their Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

"Set an Example" by Tim Challies ($9.99, Paperback) is a call to be an example to those older and younger and pursue godliness in speech, conduct, love, faith and purity.

"The Company We Keep" by Jonathan Holmes ($14.99, Paperback) is directed towards adults, but it has great lessons for young people in considering what biblical friendship is and how to choose (or reconsider) who we are friends with.

Tim Keller's "The Freedom of Self-Forgetfulness" ($6.99, Paperback booklet) is a call to gospel-humility and freedom from self-pride and self-condemnation. It's a book calling for balance to be free from self-love and self-hatred.

And finally, "Can I Be Sure" by R. C. Sproul from the Crucial Questions booklet series ($3.50 each, Paperback booklet). This booklet is about assurance: false, true and where it comes from.

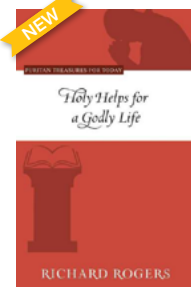

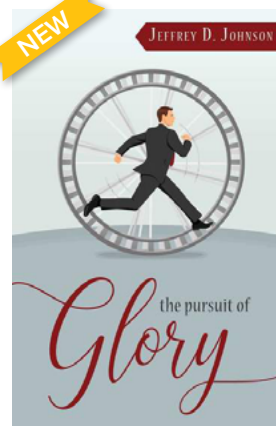

I hope this helps you as parents, aunts, uncles, youth leaders, church leaders and friends - or even if you are a teenager yourself - to know there are great things available to foster faithfulness, understanding and theological literacy for young people.

The Pursuit of Glory
(Jeffrey D. Johnson)
$15.99, Paperback

Author Jeffrey Johnson begins The Pursuit of Glory with this observation: “You and I are looking for something. Though we may not know exactly what it is, we continue to search for it. What is it? It is glory.” Explaining this pursuit as part of our human condition, the author considers the ways we try to fill that empty place in our hearts through happiness, purpose, freedom, companionship, truth, peace, holiness, and life. He shows us, from Scripture and personal experiences, why and how we will ultimately find satisfaction when our search leads us to the glory of God.

“ We don’t welcome kids into our church services as much as the church used to. And that’s often understandable. After all, kids can be noisy and disruptive. And who can expect a 5 year old to sit through a 1 hour service anyway?

In this book, Jason provides some compelling reasons to ‘Let the Children Worship’ on a Sunday morning. His reasons are good, but his application is better. Reading chapters 4 - 6 of this book will equip you to teach your children and the children in your church the joy of worshipping God with the people of God!”

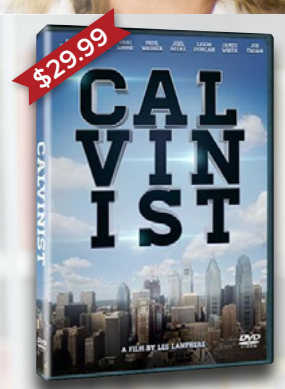

“ Have you ever felt like you should be doing more for Jesus? Or that you could do with a bit of recognition for all you are doing? Or just weary and burdened by the never-ending needs and responsibilities?

Jesus says “Come to me, all who labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn from me, for I am gentle and lowly in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light” (Matt 11:28-30). If you’ve never thought much about what he means, or you no longer think it’s true for you, or you’ve forgotten what it feels like, then this 123-page book is for you.”

“ If you don’t have ninety minutes to spare in your busy schedule, you need to free up that much time to watch this DVD! Calvinist is by far one of the best Christian films/ documentaries I have ever seen. Les Lanphere has captured, with amazing cinematography and animation, the passion and joy that is found in biblical (reformed) truth and has set a marker five hundred years after the protestant reformation to show where the church is today. ”

““The Garden, the Curtain and the Cross” presents the gospel clearly, but is also visually colourful and artistically subtle. God’s creation is vibrant, and when sin enters the world, the colour on the pages is duller. When the climax of the story is reached, colour returns. If reading to very young children, the illustrations are engaging. Readers will learn why Jesus died and rose again. Buy this great evangelistic resource as a gift to introduce Jesus, and sow or water the seeds of the gospel. ”
