Hussein Salim

Hussein Salim's paintings are a dialogue between different cultures, and represent his strong feelings that art must be used as a tool to initiate dialogue.

Hussein left his home country of Sudan as a refugee, and his works awaken in us an appreciation of our differences and diverse reactions, but bring us back to the shared foundation of mankind. A sense of displacement and a longing to return to his country has influenced the nostalgia in his art.

His richly textured canvases employ an extravagant layering technique to create a dense impasto feel, using personal symbolism that is both ancient and contemporary.
