

Marazzi is the one of the leading manufacturers in the ceramic tile industry. Symbolising the best of Italian style and manufacturing in the interior decoration and design sector, Marazzi is presented all around the world in over 140 countries.

Marazzi was founded in 1935 in Sassuolo, Italy, in what was to become the top international hub for the creation of state-of-the-art, high-end ceramic tiles, which has grown together with the company over the decades.

In fact, Marazzi has been responsible for the main technological and design innovations in the ceramic tile industry – some of which have become major milestones in the history of modern ceramics – that have made the company and the district a bench mark for the entire ceramics world.

An unflinching flair for research and experimentation, the ability to predict and respond to changes and developments in lifestyles, architecture and design, and the prioritizing the environment with sustainable practices.

These are the strong points that have enabled Marazzi to rise to the top of its industry, in Italy and internationally, and constantly confirm its leadership.

QUALITY, ENVIRONMENT & SAFETY

Marazzi is a standard-bearer in the ceramic tile industry for eco-sustainable practices, and has helped to make ceramic tile production a closed-cycle process. Throughout the entire process, Marazzi has developed a system for the collection and reusing of rejected waste, processing wastewater and the raw materials it contains, and then heat generated in a number of phases. An environmental quality criteria is applied to the entire manufacturing cycle, limiting consumption of natural resources and environmental impact, through the restoration of quarries' landscape and vegetation, controlled waste management, the optimisation of energy consumption and the recycling of industrial wastewater.

The safety of the staff who work in the plants is another absolute priority: Marazzi performs constant checks on occupational health and safety levels, making any technical and organisational changes required, including through direct involvement of its employees, to whom the company offers continuous educational and training courses to guarantee compliance with the set safety and environmental standards.

In 1994, Marazzi Group was one of the first companies in the industry to obtain ISO 9001 certification which guarantees the quality of the products and services supplied, while its environmental management system has been ISO 14001 certified since 2003. In 2018, Marazzi Group obtained occupational health and safety management certification according to the OH SAS 18001 standard.
